ABSTRACT

Tympanic perforation is a frequent pathology in our environment. When a perforation is more than 12 months old and does not close, a tympanoplasty is suggested. In most of the cases that we receive, risk factors make it difficult to close the perforation, which is why I proposed a graft with a double layer of temporal fascia. After studying the patients in comparison with other types of grafts, we obtained a greater effectiveness in closing the tympanic perforation with the double fascia graft, especially in patients with a history of chronic otitis media and previous surgeries. The idea of the conference is to explain how to do this technique because it represents a good alternative for handling complicated perforation, in addition it does not require an extra cost or extraordinary care.
